16th National Conference on Chronic Disease Prevention and Control

Cultivating Healthier Communities Through Research, Policy, and Practice

Join us in Atlanta, Georgia, for the 16th National Conference on Chronic Disease Prevention and Control, “Cultivating Healthier Communities Through Research, Policy, and Practice.” The conference is sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Association of State and Territorial Chronic Disease Program Directors (Chronic Disease Directors—CDD), and the Prevention Research Centers (PRC) Program. The conference will be held at the Sheraton Atlanta Hotel, February 27–March 1, 2002. Nearly 1,000 health professionals and others are expected to attend. The conference is large enough to address a broad range of interests, yet small enough to enable participants to meet the speakers and network with other participants.

Conference Goals

- ◆ Promote knowledge and awareness of successful, cost-effective approaches to reduce the burden of chronic diseases.
- ◆ Share cutting-edge research and research methods in chronic disease prevention and control.
- ◆ Promote the development of new skills in critical chronic disease areas.
- ◆ Improve cultural competence and the ability to work with diverse populations.
- ◆ Promote the application of proven prevention strategies from research and identified best practices.
- ◆ Develop new working relationships among federal, state, and local health departments, voluntary health agencies, and professional organizations.
- ◆ Build and strengthen coalitions and partnerships for the prevention and control of chronic diseases.

Conference Objectives

By the end of the conference participants will be able to:

- ◆ Identify at least two new potential chronic disease prevention partners whom they have learned about at the conference.
- ◆ Describe two cost-effective, integrated approaches to reduce the health and economic burden of chronic disease.
- ◆ Apply one skill to a priority chronic disease area.
- ◆ Identify two strategies for improving cultural competence in their organization or chronic disease prevention programs.

Who Should Attend

- ◆ Physicians, nurses, dentists, nutritionists, dietitians, health educators, epidemiologists, statisticians, behavioral scientists, health communications specialists, evaluation specialists, health economists.
- ◆ Public health and education professionals in government at the local, state, and federal level.
- ◆ Academic and research staff and students from educational institutions.
- ◆ Managers, directors, and executives from voluntary and health professional associations.
- ◆ Representatives from managed care organizations.
- ◆ Representatives from special interest groups, business, and industry.
- ◆ International health professionals, managers, and researchers involved in chronic disease prevention and control.

CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

The theme, “Cultivating Healthier Communities Through Research, Policy, and Practice” captures the opportunities and challenges we face at the beginning of the 21st century in chronic disease prevention and control. The subthemes below, which have served as a framework for conference planning, are touchstones for effective public health action now and in the future.

- ◆ Creating policy and environmental change.
- ◆ Eliminating health disparities.
- ◆ Promoting healthy behaviors and quality of life at every age.
- ◆ Implementing social marketing and communication campaigns.
- ◆ Advocating for chronic disease prevention and control.
- ◆ Fostering creative partnerships.
- ◆ Addressing emerging issues in chronic disease.
- ◆ Building upon research findings and methods.

Plenary Highlights

“Cultivating the Future of Prevention,” the opening plenary, will be addressed by invitee C. Everett Koop, former Surgeon General and current Senior Scholar at the C. Everett Koop Institute at Dartmouth.

This year’s Fries Prize winner, Nobel laureate Baruch S. Blumberg, MD, PhD, who discovered the hepatitis B virus in the late 1960s and invented the vaccine against it in the 1970s, will provide the second plenary addressing how research translated into practice has promoted healthier communities. Worldwide vaccination for hepatitis B will save millions from liver cancer and chronic liver disease.

The third plenary will focus on public health across the life span. Josefina Carbonell, Health and Human Services Assistant Secretary for Aging, will discuss healthy aging. Assistant Secretary Carbonell founded a small senior meal site that she transformed into the largest Hispanic geriatric health and human services organization in the nation, which now operates 21 different sites serving more than 55,000 seniors with the aid of over 500 volunteers.

Michael Resnick, Professor of Pediatrics and Public Health, and Director of the National Teen Pregnancy Prevention Research Center, University of Minnesota, will present new research related to school and community roles for promoting protective factors in the lives of adolescents, including a discussion of the dual strategy of risk reduction as well as promotion of protection to maximize the well-being of young people.
